Computhink Announces 15% Discount for Non-Profits

CHICAGO, IL, October 2, 2013 – Computhink, a global provider of document and content management software, has decided to make its flagship product, the Contentverse document management system, available at a special 15-percent discount to non-profit organizations.

The discount—which is on a permanent basis—is part of an overall corporate strategy to support the valuable work of non-profit groups.

Most non-profits are forced to function on extremely tight margins. But, at the same time, they face unavoidable expenses. There is no escape, for instance, from the heavy burden of extensive rules and regulations as well as rigorous reporting for the IRS. The greater the administrative overhead the less funding is available for the worthy causes themselves.

Contentverse provides a clear solution - the ability to speedily retrieve a digital document which significantly cuts the expense of a paper-based system and frees staff to handle more people-focused projects.

“Contentverse is a winning solution for non-profits. It gives them the ability to focus on executing their charitable purpose while reducing the burden of excessive costs and overheads, said John Stelmach, CEO of Computhink. “We felt it was appropriate alongside the launch of Contentverse to permanently offer a 15-percent discount for their causes. We’re delighted to be able to make this contribution and look forward to helping as many non-profits as we can.”

Unlike profit-making corporations that are obviously designed to make money, the mission of non-profits is to provide people with services and benefits that are not delivered by local, state, or federal groups. Nevertheless there are extensive laws and regulations with which they must comply, including the Internal Revenue Code, Section 501(c) and the tax-deductible contribution guidelines of Section 170. There are also strict reporting rules to the IRS which, if not handled in a compliant and timely manner, carry hefty fines.

Contentverse enables non-profits and organizations of all types to comply with various regulations, increase efficiency, improve service quality, and reduce costs associated with storing, searching, viewing, and “workflowing” organizational files. Through both web and desktop clients, Contentverse is able to answer the needs of non-profit organizations any way they see fit.
